THE BLOOD IS THE LIEE.

NEW DISCOVERY. COMPOUND OXYGEN TREATMENT.

HOW CONSUMPTION MAY BE CURED.

The blood receives the last finishing touch in the lungs. The reader will see the importance of sound lungs in order to make healthy blood, as a sufficient amount of pure alt found come in contact with it before blood is constituted, and if the lungs are diseased, depriving him of the requisite amount of oxygen, be will fade away and die for want of blood, which is the life, unless the deaxy is first arrested, and the lungs power or capacity restored. This contact takes place in the longs—not such a contact as the actual commission of the lungs—not such a contact as the actual commission in the longs—not such a contact as the actual commission in the longs—not such a contact as the actual commission in the longs—not such a contact as the actual commission in the longs—in different vessels. The aft is in the lungs—this to be converted into blood is in the little veins or tubes which are spread accound over the sides of the air cells, as a vine is appread over the sides of the air cells, as a vine is appread over the sides of the air cells, as a vine is appread over a wail; but these little vessels have sides to very thin that the life-giving material of the air passes through into the blood—just as the warmth of the air passes through into the blood—just as the warmth of the air passes through into the blood—just as the warmth of the air passes through into the blood—just as the warmth of the simple and object of the removal of discuss and restoration to health.

In the same manner that we breathe or inhale common air we can jobaic or breathe the combined oxygen which Dr. BROWN uses in his practice. What can be more natural, more simple and efficacious than the treatment of consumption by this method, by which the vital principle of life—oxygen—is conveyed directly into the lungs, and its life-giving properties brought to tear at once upon the seat of the disease without resorting to the uncertain action of medicine taken into the stomach, from which it is blindly sent through the intricate channels of humanity'

Talls remedy ghas been thoroughly and successfully tested in Finladelphia, and is now being introduced in New York in its present form for the first time.

Dr. BROWN is a regular graduate of Medicine, Surgery and Hygiene. Therefore in making oxygen a specialty he does not propose to take the place of the regular practitioner, but desires to co-operate with him in alleviating human suffering. Physicians are invited to call and investigate this remedy, and use it as an auxilitary in their practice.

All inquiries by letter will be answered, and all recessary integraling gives by calling upon
